VETERANS BUREAUCentral Office and District

Given Veterans Who Had Sufficient
Influence to Sway Boards, Declares
Dr. R. F. Southern in Committee.

By United Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—"Dishonesty, bad judgment and careless" were adjectives in the rating of compensation due disabled veterans by district officers and the central office of the Veterans Bureau, Dr. R. F. Southern charged today before the Senate committee investigating the bureau.

Dr. Southern, a member of the special committee appointed by General Hines to correct abuses, told the Senate committee ratings had worked great injustice both to veterans and to the government.

Southern said rating boards had been swayed by various kinds of pressure. He mentioned personal interviews by congressmen and senators which had caused undeserved rates of compensation to be paid veterans who could collect such support.

The witness censured his criticism on the rating of the Washington district, but said that the Minneapolis and Atlanta districts had also been susceptible influence by interested persons. Southern said many cases had been removed from the central offices.

"Cases used to come through marked 'congressional' with a yellow tag attached," Southern said. "These cases were given special attention. If one doctor refused to recommend, the compensation board did it and sent to other doctors in the bureau until one would approve it."

The witness said this yellow card system had been abolished by General Hines, present director. The hearing was delayed today by a long executive session of the committee which was followed by a protracted conference between Colonel James Hasty-Smith, counsel for Colonel Forster, with the committee. It was understood that Hasty-Smith requested the right to cross examination of witnesses who made statements attacking the moral or official integrity of Forster. The committee reserved decision.

Commissioner Sent To Take Reins of Saxon Government

By United Press.
BERLIN, Oct. 29.—Chancellor Stresemann backed up the central government's demand that the Saxon president, Ziesener, dismiss his cabinet today by sending Hurr Schulze to be civil commissioner of Saxony. Schulze has orders to demand that the state diet form a new cabinet in place of the one dismissed by the central government.

He was instructed to give the diet a chance to show its willingness to submit to the authority of the central government. If it refuses he has orders to effect the dissolution of the assembly.

Communists and extreme Socialists in Saxony called for a general strike in protest against the federal act. Members' action but no decision has been reached.

Battle Grounds Hold Lloyd George

By United Press.
RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29.—Having surveyed the scene of the great Union triumph at Gettysburg, Lloyd George today saw the field on which Lee beat McClellan's army on Hatcher's Run in 1863. He was taken for an automobile tour of the grounds, covered in what is known as the "Seven Days Battle."

Lloyd George saw the Confederate flag waving along over forts and earthworks just as it waved from a flagstaff in front of the house where Stonewall Jackson died.

The British statesman displayed an insatiable passion for historical data and is constantly comparing the conditions which prevailed when these battles were fought with the vastly greater horror and potency of modern warfare.

URGENCY OF ROAD
BOND ISSUE BEING
APPROVED SET FORTHUnless It Wins November 6 State
Program Will Be Halted
Until 1925.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 29.—Attorney General George W. Woodruff today confirmed the statement that if the proposed $50,000,000 road bond issue is defeated November 6, the State will have until the third year of the governor who follows (Edward P. Shurtz) before its intensive road construction program can be resumed.

The Attorney General made the following statement:

"If the voters of Pennsylvania on November 6 reject the proposition to amend the constitution so as to provide a second $50,000,000 for road construction purposes it will not, locally be possible for Pennsylvania to issue bonds until the latter part of 1923, or the beginning of 1924."

"The constitution provides that no suggested amendment to the constitution may be submitted to the voters oftener than once in five years."

Therefore, it would be necessary for the Legislature of 1925 and 1927 to approve the proposed constitutional amendment, which would be submitted to the voters on November 6, 1928. If the amendment were then approved it would not be humanly possible to issue bonds for several months.

"The term of Governor Shurtz would have expired, and the governor following him would have served over two years before the bond money became available."

"It can clearly be seen that if the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue is not approved a work from Tuesday almost six years will elapse before the road construction program can be resumed."

COUNTY LEADS IN THE BUILDING
OF HIGHWAYSRepublican Candidates for Commissioner Play Leading Part.60 MILES IN FOUR YEARS

Fayette county ranks according to size and population and assets a valuation, as the first in the state in the matter of highway improvements. This includes roads constructed by the county, by the state and through state aid. It is an active position and has attracted wide-spread attention throughout the country and from tourists who have marveled at the number of improved roads in the county.

No county has a better record for construction of roads during the past four years than Fayette county and the county's road construction program has been during the administration of a commissioner who is a candidate again for election J. S. Langley.

George W. Hubbs, present county commissioner, candidate for election to his second full term, has taken an active interest in the road building campaign during the past four years and the success of the enterprise speaks for itself and the highest commendation for the commissioner candidate.

Thus, the Republican party is presenting two candidates ably qualified for the commissionership and with wide experience in highway and bridge construction and who it may be certain, will see that the county will get the greatest possible mileage of new highways at the smallest possible cost per mile.

Mr. Langley has always been a close student of highways and is especially familiar with the matter inasmuch as it was during his administration that the highway construction program was launched. Figures available at the court house show that a total of 60.35 miles were built in the county during the past four years in which Commissioner Hubbs was elected to his first full term as county commissioner. Summarized, the report shows:

County roads constructed by contract, 12.22 miles; County roads reconstructed, 5.73 miles; State aid roads constructed, 20.50 miles; State roads constructed, 18.50 miles; Total 60.35 miles.

Tribute to Former Pastor

The monument erected in St. Joseph's Cemetery to the memory of the late Very Rev. John T. Burns by the congregation of the Immaculate Conception Church was dedicated Sunday afternoon with befitting exercises and in the presence of a gathering estimated at 2,000 persons. Thawing weather kept many away, it was believed.

The people congregated at the entrance to the cemetery. At 3 o'clock the procession started toward the memorial, headed by the men and boys' choir and followed by priests and parishioners, the choir chanting "Te Deum" as the procession wound along the path to the pinnacle of the addition to the cemetery where the memorial stands.

The ceremony was opened by the choir singing "Sweet Home That Makes the Living Live." The blessing of the monument was conducted by Very Rev. M. A. Lanning, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church at Scottsdale, a life-long friend of Father Burns. He was assisted by Rev. P. C. Danner, vicar general of the Pittsburg Diocese. After the blessing the men's choir sang "Thou Art My Hope, Dear Heart."

Rev. John A. Green, assistant rector of the Immaculate Conception Church, led in the recital of the rosary by the assembly.

Rev. Edward Bridges of St. Vincent College at Monty delivered the dedicatory sermon, eulogistic of the life and work of Father Burns during his more than 25 years as pastor.

Father Lanning then addressed the gathering briefly, telling how beloved Father Burns was among his people. The ceremonial closed with the choir singing "Jehovah, My Happy Home."

The entire service was under the direction of Rev. Henry Gebel, pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church and successor of Father Burns.

Other priests attending included Rev. Father Winkiewicz of Holy Trinity Church and Rev. Stanislaus Morawek, pastor of St. John's Church in Erie, and Rev. Father Brennan, pastor of St. Anthony Church in Dunbar.

The monument is 14 feet high and is a cross representing the crucifixion of Christ. The memorial bears the following inscription:

"This monument is erected in loving memory of Very Rev. John T. Burns by Immaculate Conception congregation. Eternal rest grant unto him, O Lord; let perpetual light shine upon him."

Father Burns died May 21, 1922.

STEINMETZ FUNERAL SERVICES MARKED BY THEIR SIMPLICITYBy United Press.
SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 29.—A simplicity as fitting as it was eloquent marked the laying away here today of the mortal remains of Charles P. Steinmetz, the little giant of the electrical world, who up to the time of his death last Friday morning was chief consulting engineer of the General Electric Company and one of the greatest physicists of his time.

Only high officials of the company for which he labored, the immediate members of the Steinmetz family, a few close friends and associates attended the burial service which took place in the flower-banked room of the home.

Rev. Ernest Caldwell, pastor of the Unitarian Church, and Rev. A. W. Clark, a former pastor, officiated. Both paid high tributes to the memory of the late inventor and humanitarian.

Lieutenant Governor Lunn, a close friend of Dr. Steinmetz, was among the honorary pallbearers.

Interment was in Vale Cemetery in a plot which Steinmetz himself selected several months ago. It was reported today that the position of consulting engineer with the General Electric Company would doubtlessly be abolished due to the death of Dr. Steinmetz.

France Will Never Consent to Reduction of Amount of Reparations, Premier Declares; Franks Knocked From Under Proposed Conference.

By United Press.
PARIS, Oct. 29.—Premier Poincaré has drawn the eye tooth of the proposed economic conference of experts to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations in the opinion of well-informed quarters today. His speech at Compiègne and a subsequent official communiqué, it was said, have headed off what was believed to be an attempt to reduce the total of the German reparations debt and a proposal to get France and Belgium out of the Ruhr.

"France will never consent to discuss again the total fixed in May, 1921," the communiqué said, "and will never reduce the amount set by the Reparations Commission."

In his speech at Compiègne the premier declared France will remain in the Ruhr until totally paid. He pictured Germany as a hypocrite seeking to dodge debts while illegally and secretly forming a huge army, air force and ammunition factories for a war of imperialistic revenge.

The proposed discussion of Germany's capacity to pay was soon here as a misguided effort to help Germany to recuperate before she had been brought to the necessity of making payments.

Washington, Oct. 29.—The American government is not disturbed over the week-end declaration of Premier Poincaré of France that he believes that the reparations proposed by Secretary of State Hughes will be held, it was declared by a high authority of the administration today.

Poincaré's statement that he expected commission to determine Germany's capacity to pay cannot reduce the present amount of reparations as regarded here as decided entirely by home consumption.

Secretary Hughes never pretends that the conference itself could reduce reparations. It was pointed out, and there is no thought here that this would be a function of the conference itself.

J. E. Jones Observes 80th Birthday Anniversary

John E. Jones, Civil War veteran and one of Connellsville's oldest and most widely known citizens, was 80 years old on Saturday and in honor of the occasion a well appointed party, with members of William F. Kurtz Post, Grand Army of the Republic, as guests, was held at the home of Mr. Jones' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bryner, in Witter avenue. Mr. Jones is one of the most active members of the post and considering his advanced age is in good health. He was feeling fine and none present enjoyed the party more than he.

Mr. Jones was a member of the Seventh Ohio Cavalry. In the absence of W. P. Clark, post commander, who was unable to be present, until later in the afternoon, Lyman S. Strickler presided and offered prayer. After being congratulated by his comrades, Mr. Jones gave an account of his army life, pointing out the great hardships the cavalry branch had to endure. Mr. Strickler, who is also a cavalryman, told his comrades he knew what Mr. Jones had to endure and it was a wonder he was living today considering his many hardships. He told of the many battles Comrade Jones had participated in and said the cavalry had the hardest life of any branch of the army. Comrade C. H. Hill told of the battle of Gettysburg, Sheridan's march and General Lee's surrender.

Rev. B. H. Stevens, pastor of the First Baptist Church, with which Mr. Jones has been prominently connected for a number of years, was presented by Comrade Strickler with a letter containing a certificate of honorary membership to Kurtz Post, the comrades having elected him to membership June 22, last. Rev. Stevens thanked the veterans for the great honor they had bestowed upon him and said he was greatly pleased at having been made a member on his birthday.

He spoke briefly of Lloyd George's address in Pittsburgh last week, pointing out the justice of peace terms made by the English government to the Boers and likened the matter to the peace terms made to the south by the North at the close of the Civil War.

Comrade A. S. Haddock laid emphasis on the fact that Civil War veterans should leave a good record behind them.

Comrade Jones gave an account of the battle of Franklin in which he participated. The Confederates losing 13 generals and four colonels in this battle. Previous to his talk he asked how many comrades present had attained their 80th birthday and all but two arose.

Captain Dunn told of a story he had been keeping for many years. He said that Saturday was also the 49th anniversary of the blowing up of the Alhambra by Lieutenant T. B. Connelley of the Federal forces and gave an account of the event.

Comrade Clark Collins told of his wartime experiences while Comrade C. H. Whitley gave a reading concerning "Gladys" Joshua Allen, a Grand Army man and organizer of the First Congregational Church at Willsboro, Mass., for the past 55 years.

Comrade W. H. Shaw, following a request by Lyman S. Strickler, told about a visit by a delegation from the post to the public schools at Star Junction and Perryopolis. He urged all members of the post to make an effort to accompany them on such occasions.

The program concluded with the bugle call and music, including "The Star Spangled Banner."

The guests then assembled in the diningroom where dinner was served by Mrs. Bryner, assisted by Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Emerson Stillwagon, Mrs. William Hatfield, Mrs. Elsie R. Pean and Mrs. N. T. Hibbs. The menu consisted of the many good things which help to make a real chicken dinner. Grace was said by Rev. Stevens, after which Mr. Jones blew out one breath 40 candles which adorned the birthday cake baked by Pauline Suter. Large baskets of choice fruit embellished with red.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—longer coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, tongue coated feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. To have clear, pinkish, bright eyes, a healthy complexion, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of bottles are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

Protection Mark on Choice Hams and Bacon, and other Meat Products

Try 'em They're Different

No Finer Ham in the World
WHITE LILY Hams are standard; not made to fit a price. Due to the fact that they are taken only from choice, then killed in the proper way, and are cured at times—and are subjected to long and rigorous treatment, they sometimes cost a cent or two per pound more. BUT THEY'RE ALWAYS GOOD—ALWAYS DELICIOUS. And you never get a poor one. Try a piece of White Lily— you will find it requires no parboiling, an exclusive feature. Baked or broiled, they are ideal for sandwiches or the delicious cold cuts so popular. Uncle Sam passes on their excellence before you put them and each bears the U. S. Government Inspection mark. Your dealer will supply you if you ask him, and you will be delighted with White Lily. AMERICAN TOURISTS PAYING LARGE PART OF BRITISH DEBT

By LYLLI G. WILSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
LONDON, Oct. 23.—Englishmen who died hundreds of years ago are helping to pay the British debt to America.
William Shakespeare, who wrote plays and was born at Stratford-on-Avon, is helping.

The Romans, he lived here before England was England, are earning dividends today.

It is all because American tourists come here to see the things with which their school days have made them familiar, according to the European manager of a world-wide travel agency.

More than 150,000 American tourists are estimated to have passed through England on their way in or from the Continent this summer.
They are estimated to have spent between 200 and 300 millions of dollars.

Ambassador George Harvey was reported last winter to have told King George that he needed worry about the American debt, because 200,000
Americans would be over this summer and every summer hereafter and each would leave $2,000.

Managers of travel agencies estimated a minimum expenditure by each American visitor of $750 above transportation, hotels and meals.

Outside London there are three

Meccas for those of the tourist faith
—Oxford, Shakespeare's birthplace and the English lake country.
Eight out of every ten Americans, who arrived in England this summer, visited one of these places first and the other two afterward.

The old walled city of Chester, near Liverpool, is a favorite spot with Americans. The Roman walls encircle the city and its two main street-ways cut out of solid rock by Roman invaders, nearly two thousand years ago.

This summer marked the arrival of Scotland as an American resort.
Hordes of only seasoned travelers have taken advantage of the beauties of the rugged highlands. Fifty percent more Americans included Scotland in their tour this year than last.

In London are cathedrals, the Tower, other buildings of religious and historical importance and the royal family.

Americans see them all.

England is believed to be gaining in favor with visitors from the United States.

At present 80 per cent of all summer tourists visit England, either going or coming.

Plan No. 282.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

HERE is a small home, exterior finished in shingles, or, if desired, stucco, siding or brick can be used. The house is of frame construction. The outside dimensions are 28 feet wide by 29 feet 8 inches deep. It will require a 25 foot frontage.

This house has been built from a reverse plan. But this in no way alters the interior arrangement, except reversing it.

Besides a dining room, this plan provides a living alcove. The built-in living alcove is to all parts of the house a desirable feature. The living room is provided with a fireplace and clothes closet to one side.

Two good bedrooms, with cross ventilation and light from two sides, two large closets and bathroom complete the second floor arrangement.

Here is a small home which provides compactness of plan, economy in construction and every modern convenience and equipment demanded by average home building. It is a type of house which will look well in any neighborhood, and is adaptable to almost every locality. Built complete, ready to live in, including heating, lighting, plumbing, but not wall decorations, this house should be erected at a cost ranging between $4,500 and $5,500. In certain localities where costs are high, the highest figure quoted would be too low. In other localities, the lowest figure quoted would be more than sufficient. The range of $1,000 is given to cover differences in quality of materials and degree of equipment.

The plans for small homes are furnished by the National Bureau of the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects, Inc., and the department of commerce, United States government. The estimated costs of construction are based on general averages for the entire country. The United States bureau maintains an information department to answer home builders' questions. For information regarding the blue prints and specifications, which are supplied at moderate costs, address the home editor of this paper. Enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

WHAT YOU MAY WANT TO KNOW ABOUT BUILDING

Questions addressed to the panel will be answered by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States, Inc., controlled by the American Institute of Architects, Inc., and the department of commerce, United States government. Enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Q—Where should the top of a house be insulated—between ceiling joists or between the rafters?

A—If the attic space is not intended for living quarters the insulation should be placed between the ceiling joists of the second story. If the insulation is placed between the rafters, there will be heat loss through the second story ceiling to warm the attic space. If the rafters have been through the second story ceiling, they do in many Dutch Colonial houses, the spaces between the rafters should be insulated.

Q—Does a plan have to be made specially so as to include a closet bed?

A—Most forms of beds that are folded up to be stored in a closet require a space which is especially designed for them. The requirements of this closet are very easily incorporated in the plan. It is a question of having the dimensions right. It is desirable to have a closet bed in advance.

Q—Is it all right to put a cement floor on a sill?

A—No, put in a reinforced concrete slab and avoid trouble.

Q—I am informed that I can decrease the cost of my home by using 2x8 joists instead of the 2x10s, called for on the plans. The joist span is 12 feet. Is it safe to do this?

A—No. Do not reduce the strength of your house in a matter of lowering costs. If you use the 2x8s in place of the 2x10s, you will pay the difference in this over in depreciation. Cut down costs by substituting extraneous and home-made timbers. I save off the porch.

Q—I notice that some drawers slide easily and are never out of order while others sometimes stick and sometimes slide too easily. Why is this?

A—If the drawer is made carefully of well seasoned lumber, it will work properly. Badly fitted drawers get out of alignment and slide not at all or irregularly. There is a great difference between guides of soft-work as there is between machine work on automobiles.

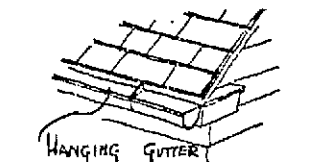

Q—How much can I save by not having a general contractor and letting the subcontractors for the house myself?

A—This is a gamble. You probably will save nothing, and you certainly will let yourself in for a lot of trouble. Get a good contractor and give him a square deal. He will save your money.

GOOD GUTTERS NECESSARY IN HOUSE ROOFING

This is the last of three articles to appear in this column by the Architects' Small House Service Bureau of the United States on "Why and Where Roofs Leak and Methods of Prevention."

It is customary for the roofer to supply a guarantee that his work will be satisfactory. This guarantee is entirely distinct from the one which the manufacturer gives to accompany his material. The contractor agrees to repair the roof if it should happen to spring a leak.

Hanging Gutter. Inexpensive and Efficient Type of Gutter.

within a given period, which is usually two years. This agreement should provide that the contractor not only should repair the roof, but should make good any damage that is done to the house through leakage. You can get such a guarantee from every reputable roofer.

The manufacturer also will give you a guarantee that his material will remain in sound condition for a long time. Do not hesitate to ask for assurances of this kind.

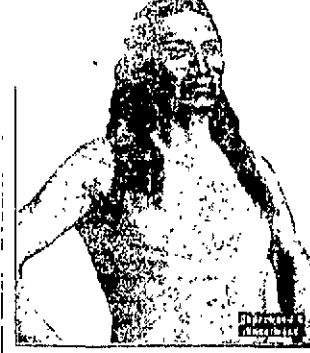

In considering roofing, something should be said about the gutters. There are a great many different kinds of gutters. Some are boxed in with the roof, some hang at the edge of the eaves. The simplest kind almost always is the best. It is almost invariably true that the open type of gutter called the "hanging gutter" is the most efficient and the least expensive. It can be repaired with less expense than any other type. If it should happen to leak, the water falls away from the building. It costs less to put it in, and less to keep it in repair than any other type.

Home builders often are disappointed because troughs rust away. The life of these troughs always can be increased by keeping them clean. At least once a year they should be brushed out and painted, especially on the inside.

When the trough puts up the gutter, make certain that he sets them so they will drain. They should be well supported at frequent intervals. There is nothing more expensive about a house than a cheap roof, and roofing is very much like the rest of the work to be done in building a house—the workmanship should be of equal value to the materials that are used.

SELECTED AS BEST LIVING TYPE OF AMERICAN INDIAN

British in name but 100 per cent American in race and type, "John Bull" has been picked as the best living type of the original Indian, for the second annual observance of American Indian day, under proclamation of Governor Walton, in Oklahoma, September 28.

John Bull, a Ponca, doesn't look it; but he is really a very fine specimen of his race and was a graduate of the first class to finish at Carlisle university, following its establishment in the early '70s. He was taken from Oklahoma to Carlisle to help erect the buildings for the school and then became one of the first instructors. Note his smooth skin, erect bearing, and other appearances of youth.

SHUN FLOATING COFFINS

French Sailors to Go to Sea on Car-

tain Ships. French freighters of a certain type have earned such a bad reputation among seafaring men, that today sailors are refusing to go to sea on them, while most draughtsmen at Paris declare they should be taken out of service altogether.

Twelve small vessels were built by the government during the war. Their holds are clear, with no bulkheads which permit the sudden shifting of cargo, and their water ballast tanks have a trick of filling unexpectedly. Five of them already have turned over. The last was the Emile Durand, which rolled over without warning and drowned 10 members of the crew.

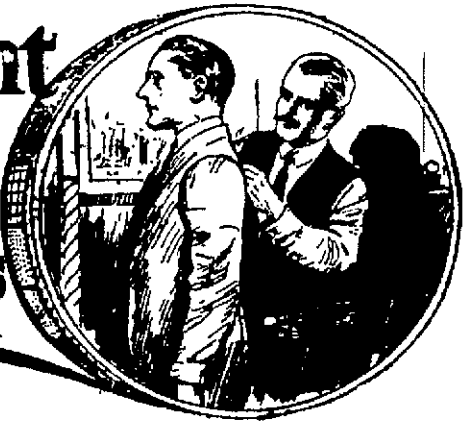

Nevertheless, some sailors are occasionally found, from time to time, who will take a chance, so several of the craft are still in use.

LAYS 60,000 BRICKS DAILY

Workmen Play at Their Trade and Set Record.

The game of "brick laying" has become an interesting source of entertainment in Batavia, which is getting new pavements. W. Brown and B. Preiser, bricklayers, are keeping a small army of men busy handing them bricks. Brown lays 60,000 bricks a day, or an average of 6,000 an hour, or 100 a minute. In fair weather, according to Brown, the two men can lay half a block a day.

Appetite Gone?

tempting, delicious looking meal—all the choicest morsels from a well stocked pantry. The fragrant aroma of all these good things calls for a keen edge on your appetite—falling to arouse, in any degree, a hardy relish for the food so attractively placed before you. Why? Scores of men and women are faced with the same misfortune. After a day of toil—when they are tired—when good things to eat should be savored—when they are hungry—when they are fatigued—their stomachs turn. They are worn down, played out. Food has no appeal. To them it is sickening. The aroma of appetizing things nauseates them.

JOSEPH GREER and His DAUGHTER by HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER.

COPYRIGHT by The BOBBY-MERRILL CO.

"You needn't mind me," Dorothy said quietly. "I'm reading the Literary News. All the same," she said, looking up at Henry from the magazine her glance had fallen upon, "I think that sort of inventor would be a wonderful person to have about. Mostly they're so awfully noble and innocent, aren't they, and about a hundred years old? Or is that just in the movies? Anyhow, I think you'll like it a lot. I wish father would give me a job in the new company."

She rose then, put down her cup, and, coming round behind her mother's chair, took her lightly by the shoulders. "I was to drag you away by force at a quarter to six," she said. (Henry noted how she had evaded using any term of address.) "It's nearly that now, and you haven't done your errand yet."

"I'm leaving a dinner tomorrow night," Violet explained to Margaret, "and as things have turned out, I'm simply gorged with meat. Can I send you away from Henry? It's going to be frightfully dull, I'm afraid."

Margaret thought she could come. She didn't mind being bored, she said, as she went over to her little writing desk to consult her calendar. Violet's food was always so wonderful.

Dorothy had come over to Henry and offered him her hand, "for luck." He returned it as he turned to her mother and asked, "How about an even exchange? Or wouldn't it be proper? Or are you going to commend Dorothy, too?"

"Yes, it's all right," Margaret said, from her desk in the corner. "Love to! Seven-thirty!"

"Oh, Dorothy's perfectly—unmistakable," Violet told Henry. "She's dining and dancing somewhere tomorrow night. I don't think in the least tomorrow where. All I have is a few dozen invitations for her for Easter week."

"I'm devastated that I can't dine with you," Dorothy cried in the best accents of Vanity Fair. "It would be much more amusing."

"I call that," Henry grumbled, after he had closed the door behind them. "An informal outrage. Oh, not your going out to dinner?" he added, for he had caught a look in his sister's face that startled him. "I meant the way she's trying to snarl that lovely child. John said today that seventeen was a devilish age. He's wrong. It's thirty-eight that is."

"I didn't suppose you meant about the dinner," she said, her voice coming rather flat. "And I suppose you did mean Dorothy. But there was just a chance, I thought, that you resented the way John had treated you."

"John? In offering me the new job, you mean? That's because you don't know about it yet. Violet spoiled things, rather, making me tell it backward. It's ten thousand a year. You begin with—Sue in the company—Independence again, if the thing goes right—something like old times."

She asked him abruptly, "When did you first hear about this?"

"Why—just today at lunch. You don't think I'd keep a thing like that from you. I'm sorry I told Violet first, but it came up naturally, somehow, and then I took it for granted that she'd know anyway."

"And you accepted it finally—right there at the lunch-table?"

"No, of course not. As a matter of fact, John didn't ask me to. He knew I'd want to think it over—talk it over with you."

"How long did he give you to decide?" she asked.

"Well, the meeting is tomorrow afternoon," said Henry, and all the wind went out of his sails on the admission. "They'll want to know before then. I told John I'd call him up in the morning."

"That's what I thought you might resent," her voice flattened down upon the words and, as she'd turned away from him, they were hardly audible.

"I don't feel I'm doing unduly hurried," he assured her. "If that's what you mean, I've already decided, unless you've some serious objection to urge, that I'll take it."

"You haven't decided anything," she contradicted. "You haven't had any chance to decide. You don't know whether the process works or not. I don't believe you know whether it's ever been tried or is just a theory. John's decided it for you. He's going to take it."

to take a flier. He can afford to lose as well as not. He's used you like a pawn in a game of chess—pushing you in. It won't matter to him whether you're taken or not."

It had no answer ready, and she went on a moment later to add the capstone to the fanciful edifice. "How do you know," she asked, "that there isn't some one else he wants your place in the bank for?"

"I haven't any proof that he doesn't," he said, then, gently. "But that doesn't square with his history. He's shown us as much real kindness and good-will, during the last fifteen years, as we've found in anybody. If he treats me as a pawn it's because that's what I really am—on the business chess-board."

"You've three times as intelligent as he is," she protested.

"So was father," he reminded her. "Intelligence isn't the thing they play this game with. It wants a certain stupidity, really, to keep you marching away at it all day long like one of John's Holsteins. Father couldn't do that; couldn't keep his mind on it. He didn't hate it until those last years, because he began by getting the better of it. Well—of course, I don't know that way. And until John showed us that I never would get the better of it, short of selling on a wretched little pension when I was sixty-five or so, too old to have any life left. This thing, of course, may fail. I suppose you're right, that it's more than likely to. But, if it doesn't, it's a war out. It's a chance to live a little, while I've still got something."

He pulled up short. He'd commenced with himself in this strain of thought, but he'd never heard himself saying such things aloud.

The meeting the next afternoon was so far as its actual proceedings went, a dull affair, the inevitable legal business occupying most of the time. Two lawyers were present; a man called Nathan, who seemed to be the lawyer's attorney, and across the table young Craig from Aldrich's office, who acted at first as secretary of the meeting. Sometimes they differed solemnly, over a trivial matter of phrasing. Sometimes one of the principals took a hand. Once Henry heard Craig say to John Williamson: "Mr. Aldrich will accept this. He gave me a special memorandum on it." It meant, from the solemnity with which he spoke, have been a special tablet from Mount Sinai, and John nodded with an air of complete satisfaction. His momentary inattention quite banished. To Henry, trying hard to keep awake, this seemed mildly hilarious.

But Greer spent a sensation along in the middle of the meeting. Of the permanent directors, three, by agreement, were to be elected at his nomination; himself, of course; his lawyer, Nathan, and J. MacArthur, who was, also by agreement, to be made secretary of the company. When the election had taken place and they were ready to go on as directors' meeting, John turned to Greer and asked:

"Where is MacArthur? If he's to be secretary he ought to be here to take charge of the minutes. Can you get hold of him?"

Greer's answer was to tilt back in his chair and, reaching around without rising, press a button on his desk. Henry guessed in that instant, from a gleam in his eye, that something was going to happen.

When an office boy answered the buzzer, Greer said, "Ask Miss MacArthur to come in."

Well, there was nothing unprecedented about it, of course. Plenty of women were directors of companies and officers, too. But that they should have been led into electing her in the dark like this gave them a sense of having been tricked. John and Greer's Corbett looked pretty blank. Greer glanced around from one set, serious face to the next with an open grin.

The door opened just then, and she came in. They all got up, of course, and Greer introduced them around. Her manner, if not her appearance, was immediately reassuring. She took young Craig's chair at Greer's right hand. Two or three chairs directed questions and a cursory look through his notes put her abreast of the situation. She knew her business; so much was easy to see.

Yet also was not, Henry felt, quite the type of business woman he was acquainted with. Her dress had a somewhat mannish air which they, as a rule, are careful to avoid.

When the meeting broke up, Henry's delay, occupied by the meticulous adjustment of his muffler before putting on his overcoat, gave Miss MacArthur an opportunity, almost an invitation, perhaps, to come up and speak to him.

"Wouldn't you like to see your new office, Mr. Greer, before you go?" He followed her down the corridor with a curiously stimulating sense of adventure.

"This was Mr. Ferris' office," she said as she ushered him into a room that was just the conventional, quartered-off and ground-glass box-stall. "He was treasurer of the old company. At least," she added without a smile, "he was called treasurer."

He perceived plainly enough that she meant to tell him something, and waited with a trepidation, he was afraid wasn't quite concealed, for her to go on.

"I don't mean," she explained, "that I don't believe you know whether it's ever been tried or is just a theory. John's decided it for you. He's going to take it."

Mr. Greer is always so full of the one thing that happens to be on his mind that the rest of us have to catch hold just anywhere and fill in."

After she had gone he dropped down into the swivel-chair—his swivel-chair now—feeling the imperative need of a few minutes in which to get himself together. But before the process of recollection had fairly found time to begin, he heard steps—Greer's, he was sure—come down the corridor and turn into the secretary's office next door.

"Oh, hello!" he heard her say. "I thought you'd gone."

The other said—it was Greer—"God-froy, what an afternoon!" and plumped down heavily on her desk. "Well," Greer went on after striking a match, "I guess we've really started at last. I don't believe there's any more d-d fooling that they can think of. See you tomorrow?" he asked. "How about dinner up at the hotel? My treat—don't go until midnight."

"I can't come to dinner. But lunch is all right, if you like, and the rest of the afternoon."

"D—n it, Jennie, can't you leave the one decent working day in the week alone?"

"You have too many workdays as it is. I'll be there at one, but I won't wait. So if you're at work and don't feel like stopping, you needn't."

"Oh, all right," she replied, then. "You're an informal tyrant, Jennie."

"So would you be, Joe?" (for did she call him Joe?), "If you got the change, I guess."

The next moment Henry heard her going. Then, before he could move or think, the communicating door was thrown open, and Greer, at peace with the world, came upon him. He gave Henry an amiable smile, pleased to find him there. Before speaking he devoted a moment to a prodigious yawn and stretch.

"Well," he said, as he squeezed the water out of his eyes, "that's over. We're through with that sort of bookwork for a while, anyway. You found it as dull as I did; I could see that. Let's go somewhere and have a drink—and a drink is what I need. I'm drier right now than the country will ever be."

Greer piloted him back into a sort of grill where, apparently, food was to be had as well as liquor. Greer ordered bourbon for himself, and Henry chose a pot of orange pekoe.

"What do you make of Williamson?" Greer asked abruptly.

"Case of him?" Henry echoed. "Why, I don't know. I've known him, you see, for a great many years. He married a cousin of mine."

"Married, is he?" Greer reflected. "Living with his wife?"

Henry jumped. "Yes," he said. "Oh, yes, certainly."

Apparently, from his host's point of view, it was by no means a corollary. But, having received Henry's assurance on the point, he was content to let it drop and go back to the main theme.

"Well, I don't get any of these fellows," he said, "the financial gang. I don't see how they get away with it. I don't see how they keep themselves alive. Oh, I know you're on their side. You were in the bank, weren't you? And they put you in here to keep an eye on me. But you're no more like them really than I am. I saw that well enough at the meeting. There were a dozen things today when we both wanted to say, 'I'd be—d with it! But you've worked for 'em, seen 'em close to, and thought maybe you could tell me the answer.'"

"I'm not sure I quite understand what it is you find puzzling about them," Henry said, sipping his tea and feeling queerly at ease for the moment with his companion. "I've worked for them, as you say, a good part of my life, but they've never struck me as—unpleasant, especially. Of course, they're a—any people. But you're quite right that I'm not one of them—I'd have been a musician, if I could," he added.

"There you are," said Greer; "that's something. I suppose nature's just a form of engineering, really, and it happens to be one that a man can't make a living by—unless he's a sort of freak. Well, then, you're a musician; I'm an engineer. But what the hell are they? What do they see? What do they think they see? Oh, money, of course, but money's nothing. But a way of getting things done. What is it they're trying to get done? If I had Williamson's money I'd do something with it. So would you. I don't if he even has fun with it. Not as much as I have—on perhaps a twelfth as much. Round and round he goes looking for safe investments for an income that's already five or six times what he can spend—making more work for himself all the time."

"I suppose," Henry put in, "that it's really power he wants rather than money."

NET IS USED TO GUARD LIGHTHOUSE FROM BIRDS. Ducks, Gulls and Songsters Meet Death While Seeking Haven at St. Simond's Light.

Like the candle that attracts the moths, the lighthouse on St. Simonds Island, just off the coast of southern Georgia attracts thousands of birds. It has become necessary for the government to erect a large steel net around the glass in the top of the tower to save the windows from further injury and to protect the light and its powerful lens from possible destruction.

The light is of 2,200-candle power and is in a tower 104 feet high. It is visible on a clear night for a distance of sixteen miles, and according to C. O. Stevenson, keeper of the lighthouse, offers as much fascination to the fowls of the air as the white lights of Broadway offer to the thousands of Americans who annually visit New York.

"During the migrating season thousands of birds fly into the net," Keeper Stevenson said, "and on a dark and stormy night the net is worked overtime. Then the birds believe the light offers them a haven from the wind, but instead it hurls many of them to their death."

The lighthouse does not observe any of the same laws, but gets all the birds that come toward it. Quite often I pick up birds of rare plumage. Quite often the birds are killed outright, but some of them escape death and are either badly stunned or suffer broken wings. These I kill to end their suffering, and feel that in doing so I am showing them mercy."

"Ducks, geese, quail and doves of every kind come in and after dark I gather them up, dress them and they are soon on my dining table."

H. C. Hopkins, the taxidermist, has mounted a large variety of specimens and a visit to his home gives the impression of having walked into a bird convention.

The lighthouse is to blame for many of the birds here," Mr. Hopkins explained.

"One morning Mr. Hopkins classified the birds picked up and in this collection were Maryland yellow throats, black and white warblers, black throated blue warblers, American red start, parula warblers, iron bird, water thrush, yellow billed cuckoo, yellow warblers, black crowned night heron, gulls of every variety, cat birds, Connecticut warblers, and several other forest varieties and several varieties of ducks."

Treasures of Late Czar Flood Auction Rooms. London.—The best collections of jewels and art treasures of the Romanoff family gradually are finding their way to the many auction rooms of London and Paris. They have come in such abundance during the last two years that they come to include everything or to bring more than the normal price for such articles.

Recently the most remarkable collection of 42 old French snuffboxes in existence, once the property of the Romanoff family, was sold in London for about $75,000, considered a low price.

One of the specimens, a gold oval Louis XV box, beautifully chased, with a miniature of Frederick II in the lid and a small watch in the bottom, said to have been presented to Voltaire by Frederick II, brought $5,000.

Hongkong's Swift Growth. Hongkong, when occupied by the British in 1841, was just a barren island, and the part of the peninsula opposite, known as Kowloon, merely sand and marshland. The inhabitants were fishermen or pirates, or both. Today Hongkong with its thriving city of Victoria, holds a population of about 1,000,000. In 40 years the revenue and expenditures of Hongkong and its suburbs have increased twenty-fold. One of its difficulties is the housing question. Sanitary dwellings with from four to six rooms are being erected at a cost of $4,000 to $5,000. Hongkong's history has been so much involved that it now ranks as one of the greatest ports in the world.

Snakes Keep Ranger Busy. Happy Camp, Cal.—The other day Ernest Stettin, forest ranger, saw three-quarters of a rattlesnake wrapped around one leg and the foreleg of a serpent entwined in the foreleg of the other. He killed the reptile and went to inspect provisions. A snake's head suddenly shot forth and struck him on the cheek. It was a bullsnake.

Secretary Meeker, State Department of Labor, Has Plan to Stabilize Coal better Organization, Not Public Ownership or Operation Hope of a Solution.

SPRIT OF CO-OPERATION

Is Needed Between Employers and Employees; Suggests Collective Agreements and a System of Conciliation, Joint Committees of Both.

By H. V. HOLLINGSWORTH
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Oct. 27.—The present solution of recurring coal disputes lies in the direction of better organization in the industry and not in public ownership of the mines, or regulation by governmental agencies, according to Dr. Royal Meeker, former United States commissioner of labor statistics and research director of the International labor office of the League of Nations.

Dr. Meeker, who is at present secretary of labor and industry in the cabinet of Governor Gifford Pinchot, expressed his views for the United Press concerning the possibility of stabilizing the coal industry to prevent industrial disputes of great magnitude.

It is the constant dread of another strike to stop coal production that is causing the public to lose patience with the anthracite industry, which is a virtual monopoly for Pennsylvania.

The economic loss from this condition is a matter of grave concern to the miners and operators who submit to it and to the people of the region where the coal is mined, who are constantly subjected to the unfavorable circumstances attending every mine suspension.

Need Better Organization

"The best hope at the present time for the solution of the recurring coal disputes lies in the direction of better organization in the industry, and the working out of an agreement between the coal operators and the mine workers by which the responsibility for establishing and maintaining peace in the industry is recognized and placed upon permanent committees made up of representatives of both operators and miners," Dr. Meeker declared.

"Public ownership or operation of the mines offers no hope of a solution in the near future because neither the public nor the mine owners are ready for this step," he said.

"The business of digging, transporting and marketing coal is a very complicated business and it would require many years to educate the public, the mine owners and the mine workers for such an enterprise and to build up a public agency which could conduct this business efficiently, even if it were possible to divorce it from political appointments and political pressure."

"Essentially, it is probable, we will come to public ownership and operation, but what is needed is stabilization of the coal industry during the period of education and training prerequisite to the successful operation of the coal industry by the public."

"It is, perhaps, even more difficult to regulate private enterprises than it is to operate them outright, as public business is like the post office. The commission, the insurance and banking departments of government in controlling, stabilizing and regulating the industries included under their jurisdiction, indicate how tremendously difficult and unsatisfactory is the enterprise of regulating private enterprises by public agencies."

Public Regulation Fails
"Public regulation of private coal public enterprises has never helped to train the public to run these enterprises successfully. Such regulation has too often disappointed and exasperated the public."

"On the other hand, the successes achieved in many large and complicated industries in the way of organization, stabilization and regulation by means of cooperative action on the part of employers and workers indicate that the same principles and methods may be applied in the coal industry with equal success."

River Movement of Fuel
Dr. Meeker called attention to the transformation of the clothing industry from the worst to the best class as an achievement due entirely to this spirit of cooperation within the industry.

"Collective agreements have been made which have set up permanent, continuous joint committees of workers and employers to deal with every possible cause of dispute, before the dispute could develop so far as to be uncontrollable," Meeker explained.

"The experience in the clothing industry and many other industries shows conclusively that the best time to stop a strike is before it begins. It may be objected that the coal industry has had just the same kind of collective agreements as exist in the clothing industry and that in coal mining collective bargaining has failed."

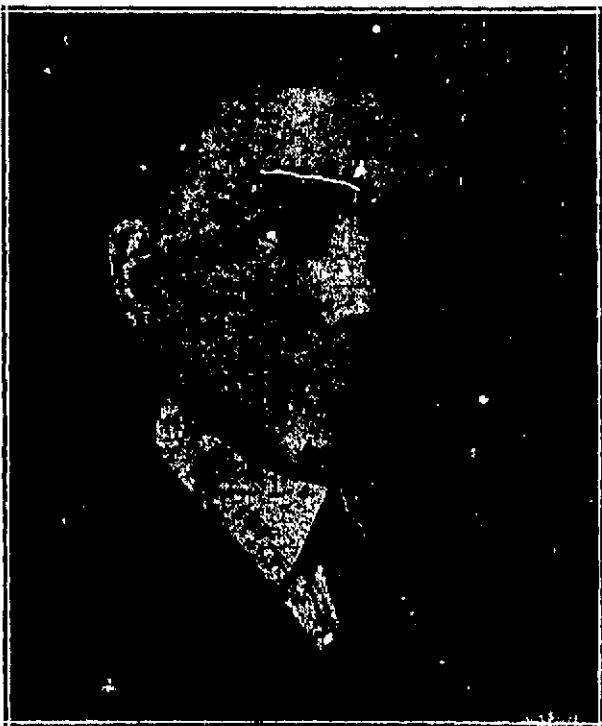

Need Machinery

"The principal difference between the collective agreements in the coal industry and in the clothing industry, has been in the machinery provided to deal with disputes."

"An inclusive organization including permanent joint committees of workers and employers to deal with every possible cause of dispute, before the dispute could develop so far as to be uncontrollable," Meeker explained.

"The experience in the clothing industry and many other industries shows conclusively that the best time to stop a strike is before it begins. It may be objected that the coal industry has had just the same kind of collective agreements as exist in the clothing industry and that in coal mining collective bargaining has failed."

The extent to which gas is becoming a competitor of coal is illustrated by the fact that 400,000 new users of gas were secured by gas companies throughout the United States during the last twelve months.
